IN THE TURKISH HAREMS. MRS. LEW WALLACE OPENS THE DOORS OF THE FORBIDDEN ROOMS.

Scenes of the Harem-Shed Gardens Where Nightingales Sing and Kneading Waters Cool the Alb-Turkish Women. By Mrs. Lew Wallace.

There is a certain something about the Ottoman Empire, but it is said—I know not how true it is—that the harems are the most beautiful and the most interesting of the empire. I have been in the harems, and I have seen the most beautiful and the most interesting of the empire.

FASHION NOTES. A pretty gown for a harem is made of many rows of puffed ribbon, with the edges lapped.

Some of the new silk stockings for wear at balls and operas are open-work and embroidered with gold and silver threads.

The several gowns are all adorned of red, deep blue, and black, with the exception of one which is a pale green.
